FRON FUBLISHER'S PREFACE.

The study of Natural History is commanding increased attention from year to year, in our own and foreign lands. The most illustrious names in science have won distinction in this comparatively modern field, and their contributions have served to exite others to the most enthusiastic and persevering labors to add the stores of knowledge already acquired.

Notwithstanding the splendid results of the labors in these made within the last twenty years, it was left for a Germancholar to bring to the task the zeal, ability, and ingenuity necessary to condense into a moderate compass the information now inal, "a chiracomplete in "hose departments that relate to the animals, passed and minerals of America".

It is now submitted with the expectation that it will supply the wants of students of Natural History, furnishing a complete text-book of the science. At the same time, it must prove to every intelligent reader a source of unfailing instruction and entertainment, as he pursues the works of Nature through all the wondrous developments of animal and vegetable life.

The German Edition of this work has already had the extraorary sale of THIRTY-FIVE THOUSAND COPIES.

NOTICES OF THE SECOND VOLUME.
From The United States Journal.

"Mr. Abbott is one of the most popular and successful writers of the day. His style is clear, easy, flowing, and very impressive. His historical writings have all the charm of romance. By his exceedingly graphic descriptions, and his faculty of linguisting to facis the virie reality of faction, he fixes the attention and stamps them indelibly on the memory. This work is designed more especially for youthful readers, but there are thousands of 'children of a larger growth,' who will find it to embrace about all the facts of American history which they would remember if they were to wade through Bancroft. It is very beautifully got up on the whitest of paper, in the fairest of type, and profusely illustrated with maps and engravings. We know of no more attractive or asciully instructive volume to put into the hands of the young than Abbott's American History.

From The Troy Times.

"The plan of this work is most commendable, and when complete it will form a valuable acquisition to any ilbrary. It is not neavy, elaborate, schoiastic, or metaphysical, but it gives the mest and substance of history in a straightforward and tangible manner; and, although more particularly designed for the young, these qualities will make it very valuable to those who have not time for the careful attudy of more labored works."

"We believe that many a man has groped through ponderous histories without bearing away from the perusal impressions as distinct, accurate, and complete as he might easily obtain from this little series."

THE ORKNEY ISLANDS. Being the third volume of THE FLORENCE STORIES. Arther of "The Rollo Books," "American Histories," &c., &c.

Herrick, after the author's sketches.

[From The Boston Transcript.]

"Here we have all the minutize of a voyage to Europe, and an excursion to the Orkney Islands. Mr. Abbott is great in little things. What he forgets to relate or explain is not worth knowing or remembering. His works contain a wonderful amount of information, stated in the most exact and literal style."

"The new volume of Mr. Abbott's charming series of Florence Stories takes the young travelers to the Orkney Isles, off the northern extremity of Scotland, where many curious objects are to be seen, and various romantic adventures to be encountered. Mr. Abbott has no superior in the production of works of this character, and puts his best efforts into this series. The volumes are heautifully printed, and illustrated with excellent woodcuts of the scenery, &c. the scenery, &c.

The previous volumes of the series were "Florence and John, and "Grinkle."

MORAL EMBLEMS; APHORISMS, ADAGES, AND PROVERBS, OF ALL AGES AND NATIONS, JACOB CATZ AND ROBERT FAIRLIE.

With Two Hundred and Forty Illustrations, truly rendered fr.
The whole translated and edited, with additions, The "MORAL EMBLEMS" of Jacob Catz, to which Da Heinsius rendered his tribute of calcade Heinsins rendered his tribute of enlogy, as also two of H greatest lyrists. Hoogstraaten and Zeenwes, are almost un even by name, from being chiefly written in the Dutch is even by name from being chiefly written in the Dutch language, of which it has been truly said that "it has been a language too hastily neglected and despised."

They form, nevertheless, in the collect, a series of the most admirable compositions in emblematic literature which any language can boast, though written at a period when the Dutch tongue, like the rest of the Northern European languages, was yet rigid and quaint in its structure, and so different in its orthographical style and idiou to the Dutch of the present day, that to most modern Dutch scholars his earlier works are almost a scaled book. Nevertheless, when Catz wrote in the vernucolar of his day, the Dutch language, like that of his cotemporary, Shakespeare, had been developing cepabilities of harmony combined with viker of expression, quite equal to our own, as an exponent of postic thought and imagery, and was one in which no writer of his day knew better how to speak to the feelings of his countrymen, and win their hearts by the pleasantly-conveyed wisdom of his "household words" than Jacob Catz.

Sir Joshua Reynolds, when a youth, was much influenced by the artistic excellence of Adrian Van de Venne's Designs for the illustrations of the Dutch folio edition of Catz's works, of which he made careful copies; and Sir Widiam Beechg's in his life of Reynolds, states that "Sir Joshua's richest store was Jacob Catz's Book of Emblems, which his grandmother, a native of Holland, had brought with her from that country."

Reproduced with the best applishees of modern art, in the Pictorial Illustration of the word pictures of the author, the original designs of Adrian Van de Venne, in a few instances only, have been deviated from, in so far as was deemed meet consistent with the elevated taste of the present day in pictorial embellishment.

MISCELLANEOUS.

'ARDLY REALIZED.

Hi'ad 'n 'orrible 'eadache this hefternoon, hand I s into the hapothecary's, hand says hi to the man, "Can yes me of an 'eadache !" "Does it hache 'ard," says 'a. ceedingly," says hi, hand upon that 'e gave me a tCephair.

REP Headache is the favorite sign by which nature maked known any deviation whatever from the natural state of the brain, and viewed in this light it may be looked en as a safeguard, intended to give notice of disease which might otherwise escape attention, till too late to be remedied; and its indications should never be neglected. Headaches may be classified under two names, viz.: Symptomatic and Idiopathic. Symptomatic Headache is exceedingly common, and is the precursor of a great variety of diseases, among which are Apoplery, Gout, Rhoumatism, and all febrile diseases. In its nervous form it is sympathetic of disease constituting bidens keadache, of worms, constituting sidesase constituting bidens keadache, of worms, constitution and other disorders of the bowels, as well as renal and uterine affections. Diseases of the heart are very frequently sittended with Headches; Anzmia and plethors are also affections which frequently occasion headache. Idiopathic Headache is also very common, being usually distinguished by the name of nervous keadache, sometimes coming on, suddenly in a state of apparently sound health, and prostrating at once the mental and physical energies, and in other instances it comes on slowly, heralded by depression of spirits or acerbity of temper. In most instances the pain is in the front of the head, over one or hoth eyes, and sometimes provoking vomiting; under this class may also be named Neuralpia.

For the treatment of either class of Headache, the Cophaide Pills have been found a sure and safe remedy, relieving the most acute pains in a few minutes, and by its subtle power eradicating the diseases of which Headache is the unerring index.

CONSTIPATION OR COSTIVENESS.

No one of the "many ills flesh is heir to" is so prevalent, so little understood, and so much neglected, as Costiveness. Often originating in carelessness, or sedentary habits, it is regarded as a slight disorder of too little consequence to excite anxiety, while in reality it is the precursor and companion of many of the most fatal and dangerous discusses, and unless carly gradicated it will bring the sufferer to an untimely grave. Among the lighter evide of which costiveness is the usual attendant are Headache, Colls, Rheumatism, Foul Breath, Piles, and others of like nature, while a long train of frightid discusses such as Malignant Fewers, Abcesses, Dysentery, Diarrhea, Dyspepsia, Apopleay, Epilepsy, Parslysis, Hysteria, Hypochondriasis, Melancholy, and inasonity first indicate their presence in the system by this alarming symptom. Not unfrequently the discasses named originate in Constipation, but take on an independent existence unless the cause is cradicated in an early stage. From all these considerations it fellows that the disorder should receive immediate attention whenever it occurs, and no person should neglect to get a box of Cephalic Fills on the first appearance of the complaint, as their timely use will expel the incidious approaches of disease and destroy this dangerous foe to human life.

GREAT DISCOVERY.—Among the most important of all the great medical discoveries of this age may be considered the system of vaccination for protection from Small-Pox, the Cephalia Pill for relief of Headache, and the use of Quinine for the prevention of Fevers, either of which is a sure specific, whose benefits will be experienced by suffering humanity long after their discoverers are forgotten.
